

Mac Lackey is an American entrepreneur who has started, scaled and sold six companies (all seven or eight figure exits).

Mac and his companies have been featured on CNN, The Wall Street Journal, Fast Company, Business North Carolina, USA Today and The New York Times. Notable ventures include: KYCK (acquired by NBC Sports), Mountain Khakis (acquired by Remington) and InternetSoccer Network (acquired by division of News Corp/Sky). He additionally served as a member of the Board of Directors for Lending Tree (NASDAQ: TREE) for over five years and is currently an angel investor in over 50 companies.

MAC'S CAREER TIMELINE:

Mac was a collegiate All-American and played professional soccer before starting his first Internet company in 1995.

Started InTouch Interactive '95 Sold 1998 (Razorfish/Publicis)

Started internetsoccer.com '99 Sold 2000 (Sky/News Corp)

Started Ettain Group '00 Sold 2003 (Partners/Private Equity)

Started Mountain Khakis '03 Sold 2010 (Remington)

Started KYCK '11 Sold 2016 (NBC Sports)

Started ISL Futbol '12 Sold 2018 (Prophet Capital + Partners)

More importantly than some of my work experiences noted, I am a devoted husband and proud father of two amazing girls. The biggest thing that being an entrepreneur has done for me is give me true life. I have traveled the world (15+ countries over the past few years), lived abroad, met my idols, had 50 yard line season tickets to my favorite team (FC Barcelona), and never missed a Donuts with Dad or a chance to carve a pumpkin with my kids.

Mac Lacey